They express the opinion that the progress of the invaders who have occupied several important positions on the coast and elsewhere in Dobruja, explained the irresistible progress of the Rumanian forces, which, having invaded Transylvania, are now merely sending out small detachments to reconquer.

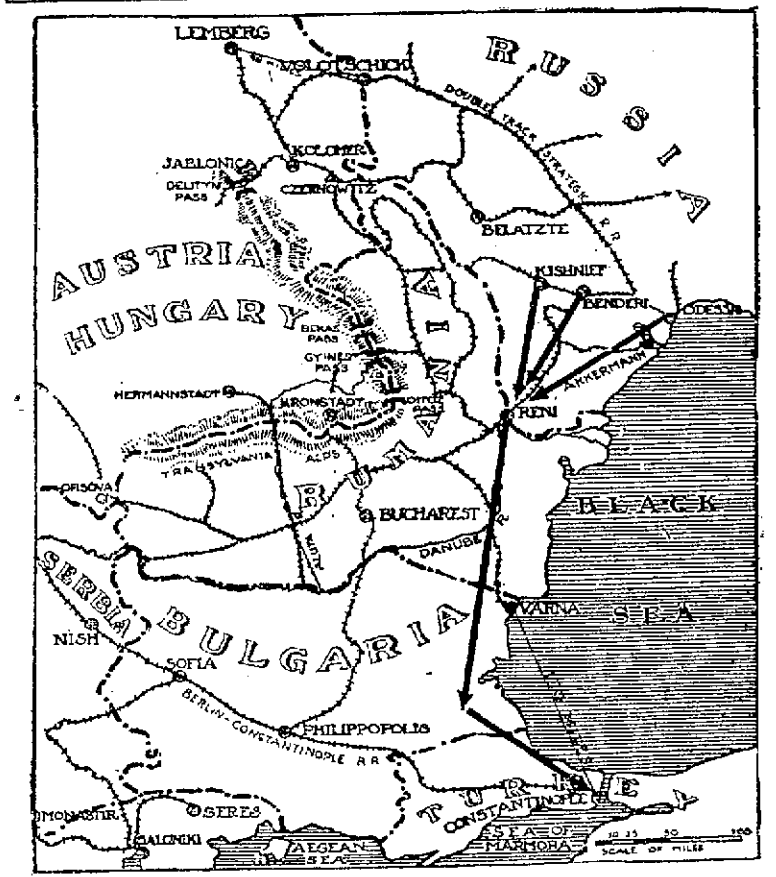

Locusts Capture Trench.

London, Sept. 8.—The British captured a German trench in high wood on the Somme front, after a sharp fight last night, it was announced today. German troops made several attacks during the night, but none of them in force. The statement follows:

Last night there was some sharp hand-to-hand fighting in high wood, where we captured a German trench, taking two officers and nineteen Bavarians. In this counter-attack, heavy casualties were inflicted on the enemy. There has been considerable hostile artillery activity against our front north of Pozieres and in the neighborhood of Mouquetia. In this sector, some of our infantry attacks were easily repulsed. A detachment of the enemy, which attempted to advance from the direction of Courcelette, was stopped by our troops.

Our troops carried out several successful enterprises in the neighborhood of Arras on the Hohenzollern redoubt and north of Neuve Chapelle. The enemy's trenches were entered, some prisoners were taken, and other casualties were inflicted.

TEMPERANCE ORATOR CHARGES FAIRBANKS IS FRIEND OF WETS

Prohibition Party's Nominee for President Starts Campaign With Attack on Republican Candidate.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Chicago, Sept. 8.—Charles Warren Fairbanks, republican nominee for vice-president, recently has proved himself a "dry" advocate in Canada, and a "wet" candidate at home, J. Frank Hanly, the prohibition presidential candidate declared in an address here today shortly prior to the departure of the prohibition campaign special on a month's western tour. Thus did Mr. Hanly quote Mr. Fairbanks as inveighing against strong drinks while speaking in Toronto.

"It is a commerce which strikes at the very heart of all we hold dear; which debauches men and undermines the very foundation upon which the home rests and imperils the social order and threatens the moral fiber of the community itself."

"Strong language that in condemnation of the traffic," Mr. Hanly continued, "Who said it? Charles Warren Fairbanks, the vice-presidential candidate of the republican party."

"And yet the man who uttered that, in absolute control of a great state convention, refused to permit it to say a word in condemnation of that thing and the national convention that nominated him for vice-president, refused to say word against it."

"Mr. Fairbanks also sent as a delegate to the national convention, to represent the city where he lived, a wholesale liquor dealer, and selected him as chairman and master of ceremonies, the day his party notified him of his nomination to the vice-presidency, and within a month actually refused to sign a remonstrance against States licensing the traffic in his own ward."

"This is the man whom the republicans are asking the people of the United States to make vice-president."

Talk in Wisconsin.

Milwaukee, Sept. 8.—Suffrage no longer is an issue in the high of President Wilson's speech of last night, and only the liquor question is the big national problem which remains to be solved, speakers on the prohibition special train to Wisconsin, said.

Mr. Hanly declared that while the president did not "go all the way" in his speech last night, he had shown no disposition to oppose suffrage in any form rigorously.

He has side-stepped the suffrage road roller along with Hughes and Landrith, who formerly opposed suffrage, said.

Only a small throng greeted the train at Waukegan, Ill., but a large crowd heard speeches from the platform in one of Racine's downtown streets.

WOMEN PLEASED AT PRESIDENT'S SPEECH

Wilson's Address Before Suffrage Convention Meets With Approval.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 8.—Delegates to the woman's suffrage convention, apparently highly pleased with the address of President Wilson last night, today began their final session of the convention with the expectation of completing their work tonight.

President Wilson, who spoke here before the National Woman Suffrage association, left at nine o'clock this morning by motor for Long Branch, N. J., to make an extended stay at Shadow Lawn, his summer home.

The National American Woman Suffrage association in session today, adopted a resolution instructing its congressional committee to concentrate all its resources upon a determined effort to carry the federal suffrage amendment through the last session of the 64th congress. The national association, the resolution further states, pledges the support of the state organizations and authorizes the national board to take such direction of the work in the state as may be necessary in its judgment to accomplish this end.

This resolution is a compromise and is a substitute for the one presented several days ago which stated that the principal and immediate aim of the national association was the securing of a federal amendment and that all state work was merely preparatory to that end. The first resolution caused so much opposition that it was withdrawn.

BREAD PRICE BOOST SUBJECT FOR PROBE

Federal Attorney in Chicago Claims Advance to Six Cents a Loaf Violates Anti-Trust Law.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Chicago, Sept. 8.—Federal investigation of the National Association of Master Bakers plan to make the price of bread six cents instead of five was started here today.

Charles F. Cline, United States district attorney, said the plan for one baker in a community to advance the price and then have the others follow would constitute a violation of the anti-trust law, despite the fact that no written agreement to control prices had been made.

The plan to advance the price of bread was announced at a meeting of the executive committee of the bakers' association here yesterday. This step was necessary, it was declared, because of a sharp increase in the price of materials.

LABOR PLANS BIG TIE-UP IN NEW YORK

ALL UNION MEN AFFILIATED WITH A. F. OF L. MAY STRIKE IN SYMPATHY WITH STREET CAR MEN.

GOMPERS IS CALLED IN

President of Federation Summoned From Maine to Take Charge of Threatened Crisis—Police Guard All Lines.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

New York, Sept. 8.—The union labor leaders of national and state prominence were called into the New York transit situation today with the announcement by local strike organizers that within twenty-four hours a conference would be held here, the outcome of which might be a twenty-four hour tie-up of all the city's industries, employing men affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Gompers Called In.

A telegram was sent to Samuel Gompers, president of the latter organization, who is on a tour in Maine, asking him to hurry here, and the Central Federated Union announced after an all night meeting that a committee had been appointed to call a general sympathetic strike in all trades if such action was considered necessary to help the employees of the Interborough Rapid Transit company and New York railway companies to win their fight for the annulment of the so-called "master and service" contract binding the men not to ask wage increases for many years. Meanwhile it was announced on behalf of the Interborough that applications would be made to the courts for injunctions to restrain labor leaders from interfering with men operating the subway, surface and elevated lines.

Police reports indicated that underground and elevated service was normal today and the surface line situation had improved. There were eighteen arrests. Policemen guarded all roads, examining bags and packages carried by passengers and making a report of plots to dynamite transit property.

Use Strikebreakers.

New York, Sept. 8.—Both sides in the street railway strike expected a crisis today when the traction company tried to re-establish normal service on its surface lines through the use of strikebreakers. The strikers had been notified that by renouncing allegiance to the union, they may get their jobs back up to one o'clock this afternoon. After that the company reserves the rights to use strikebreakers to fill the places of employees who desert. It has reduced the number of "green line" surface cars in operation by about eighty percent.

BADGER STATE FAIR HAS BIG PROMISES

Exhibits Already Pouring In—Officials Hope Annual Jinx, Rain, Will Be Eliminated.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 8.—On the eve of the opening of the Wisconsin state fair, officials today were optimistic regarding the success of the big event. Exhibits were pouring into the fair grounds in great quantities today and all will be in their places tonight. It is expected.

More interest has been shown in the exhibition by persons in remote parts of the state than ever before, according to Oliver L. Bomey, secretary of the state fair board.

The grounds have been put in first class condition by a corps of men who have been busy for months. New buildings have been added and additional improvements made where more space was needed.

Interest in the exhibits centers on the county building where a majority of the counties of the state will show prize products tonight. It is expected that the only thing which will keep the affair from being a great success, according to the officials, will be the weather. The officials are hoping to escape the jinx this year.

BEFORE AND AFTER

TEN DAYS AT CAMP

WILL ENLIST TO 100

Company Will Drill Weekly in New Armory Near Completion—Will Receive Full Equipment When One Hundred Strong.

The accompanying photograph probably shows better than anything else what over a short period of life under military supervision will do for a man. The top picture is of the Second Separate company of the Wisconsin National Guard, as it looked immediately before leaving for Camp Douglas; a group of ordinary, every day citizens such as might be collected by taking everyone on one city block for instance. Good enough citizens on the whole, but having very few of the outward characteristics that mark the typical soldier. The lower photograph was taken a few minutes after the arrival of the company in Janesville after their ten days' encampment and training at Camp Douglas. The differences are obvious. The men are erect, there is a certain determination and purpose in their faces; in short they look like soldiers. And all this was accomplished in the short space of ten days. One of the officers in command of Camp Douglas wrote to Captain Jacke apropos of the cordial reception given the returning company by the citizens of Janesville, saying that the Second Separate company was worthy of all the consideration that could be shown them and that it was perhaps the finest bunch of rookies that has been in camp there since the recent mobilization which brought out so many new men. This is indeed gratifying to the men, and has also been a great source of pride for Janesville. Whatever may be one's views on preparedness or militarism, remarked a prominent Janesville man upon seeing the two pictures, "anyone must admit that military training is a great thing to build a man up physically, to inspire in him a certain pride in his appearance and to teach him the value of discipline, of concerted action, and to put him in a frame of mind in which criticism plays a smaller part and action a greater one." The company will not let the effects of their camp life wear off, for they have planned weekly drills at the new armory which is practically completed upon the Kennerly estate on Milwaukee street. As soon as the recruiting campaign which is now being waged by the officers of the company has resulted in a total outfit of men, complete equipment will be issued to the men. At present they have their guns, bayonets and cartridge belts, but lack camp equipment. The officers have been most active in getting new men, with the result that since the company has been home from its encampment over twenty new men have enlisted. The photographs here reproduced will undoubtedly act as a stimulus to many men who have contemplated enlisting.

Temperance Talks

(By Temperance Educational League.)

The School vs. the Saloon.

During the present week almost 200 public schools began the school year in Rock county. It is one of the activities that invests every day with a new meaning. The school is a place that will not let the influence, uplift and enthusiasm that will come from it. It will cost the taxpayers of the county approximately $1,000,000 annually. Every one of these places is dealing out poison in the form of intoxicating liquor. This is impairing the health of our people and making paupers, degenerates and criminals. It leads to drunkenness, poverty, lawlessness, vice and crime of almost every description.

There are two forces at work in our community. One is maintained to foster, encourage and sustain those things that are best and wholesome and the other an institution that weakens and demoralizes society. We have mentioned these matters in this connection because there seems to be an inconsistency about it. Why should we spend our money for an institution that builds and strengthens and at the same time spend substantially three times as much for another institution that tears down and destroys? It appears to us also that it is not a good business policy to permit an institution to exist in our community that annually takes away from the people such a large amount of money and gives comparatively nothing of substantial value in return.

JANESVILLE TRACTOR

AND PLOWS AT SHOW

Machine Company's Plows and Towns- end Company's Tractor Exhib- ited at Madison Demon- stration.

A display of plows and farm machinery manufactured by the Janesville Machine company, and the initial appearance at a public show of the Townsend tractor, built in this city, represented Janesville at the Madison demonstration this week. The Townsend tractor used the Janesville plows in the plowing competition and attracted much favorable comment by its work and general construction. It is simple and compact and of popular size for the small farmer. It is also an advantage that it burns kerosene, which is cheaper and more available in many places than gas. It is a notable fact that 65 per cent of the present tractors burn this fuel, and over 50 per cent are built to use it if required.

The tractor meeting was arranged under the auspices of the large manufacturing companies in collaboration with the Rotary club and the Commercial club of Madison. The University of Wisconsin was also instrumental in helping to secure the demonstrations. It is this one of the impressive things of the event as the university has always been very conservative in its farm matters, especially in the new agricultural engineering course at the university promises awakened interest in this line.

One who was a visitor at the tractor demonstration, E. Roger Wiggins, is a guest of relatives in the city for a few days. He is in the employ of the John Deere company of Moline, and is their expert tractor con- tractor. His company has been experimenting in that line for some time, but are not ready yet to place their product on the market and Mr. Wiggins is on the lookout for new ideas to incorporate into their machine. He will leave for Moline on Sunday.

DOINGS OF THE VAN LOONS—It Must Be That Grace Got Up on the Wrong Side

Before he reached Everett's he heard faint voices, one of which was raised high. Then the short door swung outward as if impelled by a vigorous hand. A bearded cowboy wearing woollen chaps lunged out upon the sidewalk. At sight of Duane he seemed to bound into the air, and he uttered a savage roar.

Duane stopped in his tracks at the outer edge of the sidewalk, perhaps a dozen rods from Everett's door.

It was Duane who did not show to his movement. He swaggered forward, rapidly closing up the gap. Red, sweaty, disheveled and hatless, his face distorted and expressive of the most malignant intent, he was a wild and sinister figure. He had already killed a man, and this showed in his demeanor. His hands were extended before him, the right hand a little lower than the left. At every step he belched his raucous in speech mostly curses. Gradually he showed his walk, then halted. A good twenty-five paces separated the men.

"Won't you make you draw, you son-of-a-bitch," he shouted fiercely.

"You wait!" on you, Cal," replied Duane.

But his right hand stiffened—moved. Duane threw his gun as a boy throws a ball and underhand a draw his father had taught him. He pulled twice, his shot was as one. Bain's big Colt bulged while it was pointed downward and he was falling. His bullet scraped dirt and gravel at Duane's feet. He fell heavily, without uttering a word.

In a flash all was reality for Duane. He was forward and held his gun ready for the slightest movement on the part of Bain. But Bain lay upon his back, and all that moved were his head and his eyes. How strangely he had left his face—and also the expression. The devil that had showed in his eyes was gone. He was sober and unafraid. He tried to speak, but failed. His eyes expressed something pitifully and so. They changed—

Duane drew a deep breath and shook his head. He felt calm and cool, and the fog was over. One violent expression burst from him. "The fool!"

When he looked up there were men around him.

"That's correct," said one. Another, a cowboy who evidently had just left the gaming table, leaned over and pulled open Bain's shirt. He had the ace of spades in his hand. He laid it on Bain's breast, and the three bullet holes just over Bain's heart.

Duane wheeled and hurried away. He heard and her man say:

"Heard Cal got what he deserved. Buck Duane's first gun-play. Like father like son."

CHAPTER II.

When Duane came to the gate of his home and saw his uncle there with a magnificent horse, saddled, with canton, nose and bits all in place, a subtle shock pervaded his spirit. It had slipped his mind—the consequence of his act. But sight of the horse and the look of his uncle revealed the fact that he must now become a fugitive. An unreasoning anger took hold of him.

"That's a—fun!" he exclaimed, hoarsely. "Meeting Bain wasn't much, Uncle Sam. He deserved my boots, that's all. And for that I've got to go on the dodge."

"Son, you killed him—then?" asked the uncle, hoarsely.

"Yes, I stood over him—watched him die. I did as I would have been done by."

"I know it. Long ago I saw it coming. But now we can't stop to cry over our dead. You've got to leave town at this part of the country."

"Mother!" exclaimed Duane.

"Shut away from home. You can wait. I'll break it to her—what she always feared."

Sublimely Duane sat down and covered his face with his hands.

"My God! What have I done?" His broad shoulders shook.

"Listen, son, and remember what I say," replied the elder man, earnestly. "Don't ever forget. You're not to blame. I'm glad to see you take it this way, because maybe you'll never grow hard and callous. You're not to blame. This is Texas. You're your father's son. These are wild times. The law as the law is laying it down now can't change life all in a minute."

"I'm a murderer," said Duane, shuddering.

"No, son, you're not. And you never will be. But you've got to be an outlaw till time makes it safe for you to come home."

"An outlaw?"

"I said it. If we had money and influence, we'd risk a trial. But we've neither. Strike for the wild country, wherever you go an' whatever you do—be a man. You can't come home. When this thing is lived down, if that time ever comes, I'll get word into the unsettled country. It'll reach you some day. That's all. Remember, be a man. Good-by."

Duane, with blurred sight and contracting throat, gripped his uncle's hand and bade him a wordless farewell. Then he leaped astride the black and rode out of town.

As swiftly as was consistent with a care for his steed, Duane put a distance of fifteen or eighteen miles behind him. He passed several ranches, and was seen by men. This did not suit him, and he took an old trail across country. It was a flat region with a poor growth of mesquite and prickly-pear cactus. Occasionally he caught a glimpse of low hills in the distance. He had hurried often in that section, and knew where to find grass and water. When he reached this higher ground he did not, however, halt at the first favorable camping spot, but went on and on.

At last he found a secluded spot, under cover of thick mesquites and oaks, at a goodly distance from the old trail. He took saddle and pack off the horse, made a small fire, prepared and ate his supper. This done, ending the work of that day, he sat down and filled his pipe. When night set in and the place seemed all the more isolated and lonely for that Duane had a sense of relief.

It dawned upon him all at once that he was nervous, watchful, sleepless. The fact caused him surprise, and he began to think back, to take note of his late actions and their motives. The change one day had wrought amazed him. He who had always been free, easy, happy, especially when out alone in the open, had become in a few short hours bound, serious, preoccupied. He felt tired, yet had no inclination to rest. He intended to be off by dawn, heading toward the southwest. Had he a destination? It was vague as his knowledge of that great waste of mesquite and rock bordering the Rio Grande. Somewhere out there was a refuge. For he was a fugitive from justice, an outlaw.

This being an outlaw then meant eternal vigilance. No home, no rest, no sleep, no content, no life worth the living! He must be a lone wolf or he must herd among men obnoxious to him, if he worked for an honest living, he still must hide his identity and take risks of detection. If he did not work on some distant, outlying ranch, how was he to live? The idea of stealing was repugnant to him. The future seemed gray and somber enough. And he was twenty-three years old.

But what was the matter with the light of his campfire? It had taken on a strange green luster and seemed to be waving off into the outer shadows. Duane heard no step, saw no movement; nevertheless, there was another present at that campfire vigil. Duane saw him. He lay there in the middle of the green brightness, prostrate, motionless, dying. Cal Bain!

That haunting vision left Duane sitting there in a cold sweat, a remorse gnawing at his vitals, realizing the curse that was on him. He divined that never would he be able to keep off that phantom. He remembered how his father had been eternally pursued by furies of accusing guilt, how he had never been able to forget to work or to sleep those men he had killed.

The hour was late when Duane's mind let him sleep, and then dreams troubled him. In the morning he bestirred himself so early that in the gray gloom he had difficulty in finding his horse. Day had just broken when he struck the old trail again.

He rode hard all morning and halted in a shady spot to rest and graze his horse. In the afternoon he rode to the trail at an easy trot. The country grew wilder. Bald, rugged mountains broke the level of the monotonous horizon. About three in the afternoon he came to a little river which marked the boundary line of his hunting territory and followed it upstream.

In this kind of travel and camping he spent three more days, during which he crossed a number of trails, and one where cattle—stolen cattle, probably—had recently passed. He followed the road until a late hour, when, striking the willow brakes again and hence the neighborhood of the river, he picketed his horse and lay down to rest. But he did not sleep. His mind bitterly revolved the fate that had come upon him. He made efforts to think of other things, but in vain. Every moment he expected the chill, the sense of loneliness that yet was ominous of a strange visitation, the peculiarly imagined lights and shades of the night—these things that presaged the coming of Cal Bain. Doggedly Duane fought against the insidious phantom. He kept telling himself that it was just imagination, that it would wear off in time. Still in his heart he did not believe what he hoped. But he would not give up; he would not accept the ghost of his victim as a reality.

Gray dawn found him in the saddle again, headed for the river. Half an hour of riding brought him to the dense chaparral and willow thickets. These he threaded to come at length to the ford. Once upon the opposite shore, he reined in his horse and looked darkly back. This action marked his acknowledgment of his situation; he had voluntarily sought the refuge of the outlaws; he was beyond the pale.

The trail led into a road which was hard packed and smooth from the tracks of cattle. He doubted not that he had come across one of the roads used by border raiders. He headed into it, and had scarcely traveled a mile when, turning a curve, he came point-blank upon a single horseman riding toward him. Both riders wheeled their mounts sharply and were ready to run and shoot back. Not more than a hundred paces separated them. They stood then for a moment watching each other.

"Mawin', stranger," called the man, dropping his gun to his hip.

"Howdy," replied Duane shortly.

They rode toward each other, closing half the gap, then they halted again.

"I seen you ain't no ranger," called the rider, "an' shore I ain't none."

He laughed loudly, as if he had made a joke.

"How'd you know I wasn't a ranger?" asked Duane curiously. Somehow he had instantly divined that this horseman was no officer, or even a rancher trailing stolen stock.

"Wal," said the fellow, starting his horse forward at a walk. "A ranger'd never get ready to run the other way from one man."

He laughed again. He was small and wiry, slouchy of attitude, and armed to the teeth, and he bestrode a fine bay horse. He had quick, dancing brown eyes, at once frank and bold, and a coarse, bronzed face. Evidently, he was a good-natured ruffian.

Duane acknowledged the truth of the assertion, and turned over in his mind how shrewdly the fellow had guessed him to be a hunted man.

"My name's Luke Stevens, an' I hail from the river. Who're you?" said this stranger.

Duane was silent.

"I reckon you're Buck Duane," went on Stevens. "I heard you was a bad man with a gun."

This time Duane laughed, not at the doubtful compliment, but at the idea that the first outlaw he met should know him. Here was proof of how swiftly facts about gun-play traveled on the Texas border.

"Wal, Buck," said Stevens, in a friendly manner. "I ain't presumin' on your time or company. I see you're headin' for the river. But will you stop long enough to stake a refer to a bite of grub?"

"I'm out of grub and pretty hungry myself," admitted Duane.

"Reckon pushin' your boss, I see. Wal, I reckon you'd better stock up before you hit that stretch of country."

He made a wide sweep of his right arm, indicating the southwest, and there was that in his action which seemed significant of a vast and barren region.

"Stock up?" queried Duane, thoughtfully.

"Shore. A feller has jest got to eat. I can rustle along without whisky, but not without grub. That's what makes it so embarrassin' travelin' these parts dodgin' your shadow. Now, I'm on my way to Mercer. It's a little two-bit town up the river a ways. I'm goin' to pack out some grub."

Stevens' tone was inviting. Evidently he would welcome Duane's companionship, but he did not openly say so. Duane kept silence, however, and then Stevens went on.

"Stranger, in this here country two's a crowd. It's safer. I never was much on this lone-wolf dodgin', though I've done it of necessity. It takes a mighty good man to travel alone any length of time. Why, I've been that sick I was jest achin' fer some ranger to come along an' plug me. Give me a pardner any day. Now, maybe you're not that kind of a feller, an' I'm shore not presumin' to ask. But I jest declare myself sufficient."

"You mean you'd like me to go with you?" asked Duane.

Dinner Stories

Patrick had been introduced to a new circular saw. The foreman of the sawmills performed the introduction, and after giving Pat a few necessary extra instructions he left him to his work. Patrick was really interested in the buzzing blade and his curiosity getting the better of his discretion, he soon found himself minus a finger. Despite his excitability he was something of a stoic, so he bound up his wound without seeking assistance. While he was thus engaged the foreman reappeared. To him Patrick described the accident.

"But how on earth did you manage it?" the foreman exclaimed angrily, for the prospects of damages ahead were not exactly pleasant.

Patrick shook his head.

"Sure, an' I don't know," he said. "I just touched the thing like this with my finger when—I'm blessed if there ain't another one gone!"

Little Irene marched into the room breathless.

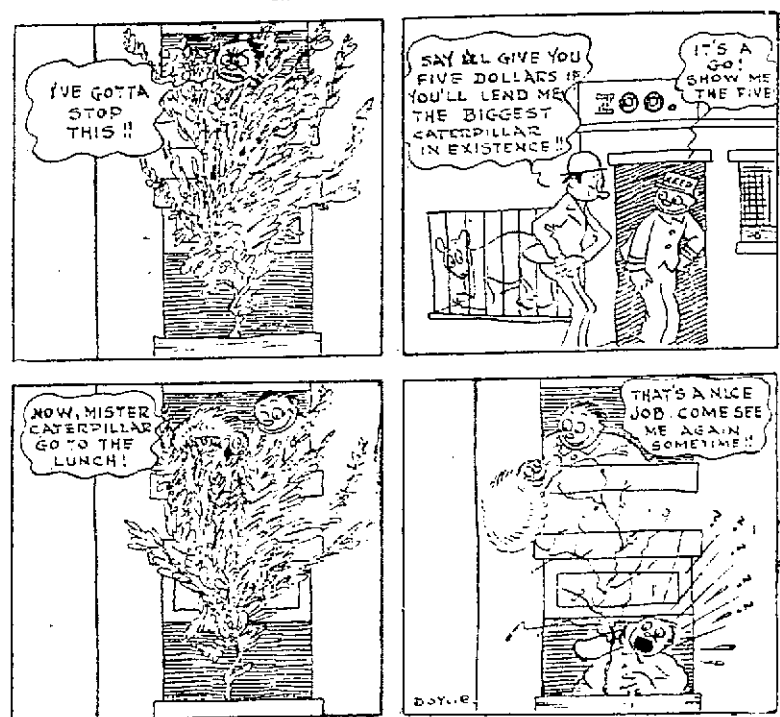

"O mother, don't scold me for being late for supper, because I've had such a disappointment," she said. "A horse fell down and they said they were going to send for a horse doctor, so I waited and what do you think? It wasn't a horse doctor at all. It was only a man."

"Your digestive organs are in very bad shape," remarked the physician after he had completed his examination. "I'll have to put you on a rigid diet. You must never under any circumstances eat tripe, corned beef and cabbage or pork."

"That won't worry me a bit," replied the patient. "I never did care for any of those things."

"Ah, in that case I'll have to order you to eat them three times a day until further notice."

A THOROUGH JOB.

PLURAL WIVES RESPONSIBLE FOR LENGTH OF LEGS OF THE SECOND GENERATION?

Salt Lake City, Sept. 9.—Sixteen applicants for enlistment, whose right legs were longer than their port side members, were rejected at the local recruiting station of the United States marine corps, during August, according to Sergeant Frank R. Busch, the non-commissioned officer in charge.

"I take no stock in the theory that it is an hereditary affliction with a Salt Lake locale," said Marine Sergeant Busch today, "but it is a peculiar fact that very many males of this city have starboard gambs longer than their left ones. One explanation is that the male forebears of this younger generation had their legs pulled so often and hard by their plural wives during the spring bonnet season that the offspring has been marked with a flat report."

SOX GET GOLDFISH; SKIN INDIANS, 3-2

Eleven Inning Battle to Rowland When Cleveland Catcher Hurls Ball Away From Missed Strike.

A missed third strike and a heave into right field terminated an eleven inning game between the Indians and the White Sox at Chicago yesterday, and the Sox won, 3 to 2. Cicotte was the guy to make the bad but lucky swing and Zeb Terry, who rested on second after working hard for a pass, scored from the general sack.

MORRIS MILLER

John Gangel is getting $1,300 a month for loafing—but John isn't wildly happy about it. "I've spent every summer of my adult life working—and I can't get out used to this taking it easy" idea," says John. "I'd like to handle a ball club again." John managed the Rochester Internationals along toward the latter part of 1915 season. Then Lee Magee quit his job as pilot of the Brooklyn Feds and the Ward family hired John at $7,000 per season. The Feds are no more—but that contract is. It was a personal agreement between Gangel and the late Robert B. Ward, and it's taken back until the end of the 1917 season, meaning that John is going to get $15,000 for doing nothing. "But I'll rather work than take a month and collect the mazzini," declares John.

It was hoped that after the collapse of the Federal league the professional baseball players who were lucky enough to retain their jobs in the big leagues and the ex-Feds who jumped from organized ball but were not taken back into the fold would not stir up any more trouble, but it appears that the poor "down trod" are about to make more demands from the club owners. No howbeit, until the championship season is finished and possibly not until next winter. It is said the players will insist on the abolishment of fines for misbehavior during a game, whether due to holding errors or mistakes of judgment, such as failing to "take" signs or doing something contrary to the manager's orders on the field.

Some managers have, as a matter of example and discipline, imposed fines when the fault has been so plain that it has appeared like carelessness or indifference, and since this seems to be the only way effective punishment can be inflicted it would be a bad day for discipline indeed if the idea of the players was put in effect. Another demand of the players will probably be a fifty-fifty share of the gate receipts for all exhibition games on week days and all Sunday games that are not officially scheduled. There are several other minor demands the players are said to have in view to make. Without doubt, the club owners will be up in arms, and there are prospects of a hot fight between them that may take on all aspects of a strike, but the fans need not fear any serious interruption to the gathering of ball teams in the spring.

Hank O'Day was umpiring. Natty was on the coaching line. Herzog was on third for the opposition. A mixup was inevitable, and it came in the sixth inning. Herzog rapped one down to Chase, and Hal's throw pulled Mitchell off first base, but not till it seemed as if he had hooped the bag ahead of the runner. Great excitement when Harrison said "safe." Immediately the Reds' present manager galloped to the Reds' former manager to have him call the Reds' ex-manager out on a reversed decision. "The Reds' former manager said that the Reds' present manager

OLD MAN MERKLE IS HELP TO BROOKLYN

The captain of the ship Hardtack was on one occasion greatly exasperated by the complaints of the men in the forecabin of the quality of the meat supplied to them. "Shure, an' I won't deny that it shouds," he said, as one of the malcontents brought a particularly offensive morsel for his inspection. "But you boys are always grumbling and bled, if you got baked angel for dinner you'd growl about the stuff."

---and the Worst Is Yet to Come

It seems that Robinson's trade of young Lew McCarty for Fred Merkle was a wise deal and though Fred is another vet to join Robbie's home for old men he has steadied the Dodgers' infield to write already. Merkle does valuable work with an ease that makes it seem trivial and his ability and experience more than make up for the loss of so good a youngster as McCarty.

The tennis player who hits the ball hardest does not necessarily wear out his racket the most rapidly. For instance, Bill Johnston, the national champion, has the most powerful forearm drive in the world. People who make a study of these things have proved that, when Johnston's phrase goes, "It moves a bit faster than when any other heavy man puts his weight behind a shot."

"Pack" Griffin, his doubles partner on the other hand, who seldom strikes really hard, and depends more on control and placement than speed, wears out rackets as quickly as any man in the game. The reason for this apparently peculiar state of affairs is that Griffin almost invariably puts work on the ball. This means that he always is cutting it striking across the surface to impart "English." Nothing so surely frays the tightly strung, sensitive strings.

Side Lights on the Circus Business

By D. W. WATT

Former Manager Burr Robbins and Later Treasurer of Adam Forepaugh Circuses.

It is very often that you will hear people say, "If you want to see all of a great circus, you must go in the afternoon." Now this is a mistaken idea. Only a short time ago I heard a lady say to some friends, "We always go to a circus in the afternoon, and have for years." Why, she said, "do you know that several years ago we went to see the Barnum show in the evening, and shortly after seven o'clock, long before the evening performance commenced, they commenced taking many of the big wagons to the railroad yards, where they were loaded, and ready to leave for the next town."

She did not stop to think that there were probably fifty big wagons connected with the cook tent and other privileges around the show that had nothing to do with the big show and it was necessary to load them, and get them out of the way before the menagerie or the big top was torn down.

In my time in the business I have known in cases of long runs from one town to another, that the show would be hurried through, but in all cases every act would be given in the evening just the same as in the afternoon. Only a few years ago the great Ringling show showed in Salt Lake City on Saturday and their Monday stand was at Reno, Nevada, a distance of 578 miles. This was one of the longest runs ever made by a show in the same length of time. The show arrived at Reno shortly after four o'clock in the morning, and while a great show like this has to make more or less long runs to that country, yet the run from Salt Lake to Reno, I think, is the longest in history.

While visiting with A. D. Burdick of Milton a few days ago, I happened to mention the fact that I had a long visit with Madam Doekrell during the stay of her show in the city. The old man's eyes brightened and he said, "You don't tell me! Is it possible that Madam Doekrell was in Janesville the week of the fair?"

Mr. Burdick dates back to the early days in the show business when Barnum, Forepaugh and Dah. Rice were still young men in the business, and here at Janesville, Burdick was the private groom of Madam Doekrell when she first came over to this country from Europe. Mr. Burdick said that it was seldom that he did not come to the show on Saturday, but as he was not feeling well at the time, he missed fair week.

"But I would have been to Janesville and made a visit with Madam Doekrell at the time if I would have had to walk," he said, "for nobody in the show business was ever nicer to me than H. R. Doekrell and his wife, and I was the first American groom to take charge of their horses after their arrival here. I know the Madam Doekrell and I could have visited over the old days of more than forty years ago and one that neither of us would ever have forgotten."

If there is dew on the ground in Oak Park today, it is because the grass and flowers are shedding tears in sympathy with half the youngsters in the suburb who were cheated out of circus day yesterday.

For every growl of the lion, there were a hundred "boo hoo's" from the childish population. Over on the circus lot Loop & Lent's magnificent exhibition of colossal monstrosities was tied up tighter than a wet drunkard in the sunbathing because of various acts in the sunbathing, suits and other legal anchors.

The circus had completed a tour of Canada, where a war tax on every ticket cost the management some $20,000, the greatest three ring aggregation has been trying to recoup. The creditors admit it, but deny they are willing to be the recovery. Hence a butcher from Kansas City, a hay dealer from Iowa, and the provender dealers from other distant points plastered the circus with writs.

Presently there was a battle and the police were called. "Hey Ruba," resounded from the horse tent, the conflict was short and swift. The circus went into winter quarters and the youth of Oak Park, denied the joy of the tinsel, the clown and the hippodrome, went sobbing to bed.

Through Mr. and Mrs. Collier, who were with the Coop & Lent show during the season, I got the above information as to the closings of the show. Their trip through Canada, said Mr. Collier, was a disastrous one for every thing in the way of license and all kinds of foodstuffs for the people, and when the people commenced to go to the show, they not only had to buy their ticket for the big show, but in addition had to pay ten cents extra, which was called a war tax, and to come to the show they had to buy a war ticket which cost one cent. After the show closed for the season in Oak Park, Ill., everyone connected with the show was paid off in full, and the show left for Cedar Rapids, where it went into winter quarters, and will be remodeled and started out next season better and better than ever before. But it is fair to say that it will be some time before the Coop & Lent Show or any other circus will invade Canadian territory.
